Fraditional Copyright: The exclusive legal right to make copies, license, and use a literary, musical, or artistic work

Creative Commons: A type of copyright which allows creators to grant some permissions to their creative work

Public Domain: Belonging to or being available to the public as a whole; not a subject of copyright

What about Fair Use?

Law Says: Allows for educators to share, use, and/or mix 10% of an item without consent.

So legally we can...

Play approximately 35 seconds of a 3:30 minute song And show 12 minutes of a 2 hour movie

And (approximately) this much of a picture

5 Rules of Fair Use:

- 1. Are you creating something new or just copying?
- 2. Are you competing with the sources you're copying from?
- 3. Giving the original author credit doesn't let you off the hook.
- 4. The more you take, the less fair your use is likely to be.
- 5. The quality of the material used is as Important as the Quantity.

Welcome to the Research tool!

Here you can search for any topic that interests you, find information, images, quotes, citations and more, and then quickly insert them into your document. Google has added a research/citation feature to both Documents and Presentation. And it can be filtered by license type.
